100 Women Who Care Contribute to Highfields

This month, Greater Lansing 100 Women Who Care voted to give their quarterly donation to Highfields, Inc. The organization is comprised of 173 women, each of whom donated $100, totaling a donation of $17,300.

“We are grateful to 100 Women Who Care for their generous contribution to Highfields. By making this donation, they are positively impacting the children and families that we serve,” said Brian Philson, CEO/President of Highfields.

The donation will be put toward the purchase of a van to be used in the Lansing area. The van will help provide transportation for both our residential program and our community services office in Lansing.

“It’s so empowering for the women in our group to know that their combined donations can make a huge impact for a deserving non-profit,” said Rose Zack, one of the women who presented the check to Philson.

Greater Lansing 100 Women Who Care meets quarterly to vote on a nonprofit, charity or cause to which each woman will donate $100. Their combined donations create impactful changes in the Lansing area. Zack and Donna Oade presented the check to Philson together at Highfields’ Lansing office.
